What is Farsickness?

Farsickness is a fast growing travel blog with a focus on culinary and historical travel and living abroad. Through carefully crafted photo essays and well-edited essays, Farsickness tells the story of travels through North America, Asia, and Europe while also providing practical tips for trip planning, finding the best meal, and expat life.

Farsickness aims to discover culture and history through culinary experiences, outdoor adventures, and responsible tourism.

Who is Amanda?

Amanda is a world traveler and serial expat always in search of her next great meal. Since leaving the United States in 2009, Amanda has worked as an au pair in Rome, taught English in Korea, and backpacked around Southeast Asia. She currently lives in London while studying for an MA in Digital Journalism and trying to prove that all English food isn't bad. Amanda has knowledge, experience, and passion for all things travel, food, and social media related.

Audience Profile

Farsickness's readers are mostly educated women between the ages of 18-34 with an interest in travel and food. Most readers come from the United States, South Korea, United Kingdom, and Australia.
